This week brought the news of another deadly attack, this time in the airport in Istanbul, Turkey, killing more than 40 people. It comes on the heels of the attack in Orlando, and those in Belgium and before that, Paris. And so many more barely even make it into our news. Some of these are the work of terrorist organizations; some the work of lone attackers, prompted not only by religious or political extremism, but also fear, hatred, isolation, and mental illness. And each time these things happen, we are challenged as Christians about how to respond.

Since the time of the Emperor Constantine in the fourth century, the western world has been considered to be 'Christendom,' that is, Christianity has been the default religion. That is beginning to change, as more people follow other religions or no religion at all.

But our culture and laws have been largely shaped by Christianity, and in many cases, they continue to reflect, or at least be consistent with, our faith. But that's not true of everything. Jesus said many things that challenged the culture of his day, and of ours.

One of the places where the words of Jesus are a challenge are in how we deal with evil. The problem of evil has had a long history of discussion within Christian theology, largely focused on questions of how a good God can bad things to happen. But when we are faced with the killing of young adults in Orlando, or travelers in Turkey, when we can identify particular individuals taking actions that are indisputably evil, the question becomes much less academic. How do we respond?

There is of course the response that happens at the governmental level. But there is also the response that we make in our own hearts and prayers. And this is where our culture and our Savior collide.

Our culture says that someone who does an evil act is evil through and through, and should be punished. We are encouraged to fear and hate them. And if they die, their memory should be wiped from the earth.

And so often, that feels right. We want the world to live in to be fair, for people to live with (or die with) the consequences of their actions.

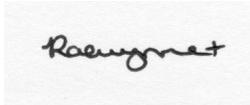

But Jesus said something different. In Luke 6: 27-28 he is recorded as saying, "Love your enemies, do good to those who hate you, bless those who curse you, pray for those who abuse you."

I suspect that is one of the hardest things in the whole of the gospels for us to do. We don't want to pray for people who hate and hurt us. We want them to pay for what they have done. But that's not how Jesus sees it. "God loved the world so much that he gave his only son," he said. God loves us, all of us, every human being, and extends grace and forgiveness to us, no matter what we have done. And then God expects us to extend that grace to others. We might not be able to go as far as loving them like God does. But we can pray for them. We can pray that the living will know the grace and mercy and love of God, and that it might transform them. We can remember the dead as people who have done wrong, but who once held the promise that every child holds, and who have been lost.

It's hard. But it's the gospel.

Blessings

GOD DOESN'T GO ON VACATION

Our worship continues on its usual schedule over the summer, with Eucharist at 8 and 9:30 a.m. on Sundays, and at 9:30 a.m. on Tuesdays. Sometimes, missing worship is unavoidable, but other times it's easy just to not get 'round to it.

We miss you when you aren't here. The whole church is the poorer for your absence. And if you are traveling and visit another church, please bring back a copy of their bulletin, or even better, a "selfie" in front of the church, and put it on the notice board in Mills Hall. It's a great way of sharing our journeys on land and in faith!

THE WARDENS' COLUMN

Hello Summer!

As we rush headlong into the warm arms of summer the irony is that despite the longer days and docile weather, we just seem busier than ever. Play dates, picnics at the beach and traveling with friends and family, backyard BBQs and sports seem to take up all the extra hours. Attending church sometimes gets lost in the shuffle. Bible study can be put on the back burner. Spreading the word of the Gospel gets lost in the laughter of having fun and feeling free.

Yet ministry is never on vacation. There are simple ways to reach out to others without expending too much time or energy. A lonely neighbor, an elderly parishioner, a recently widowed friend can be embraced. A stranger can receive a smile. A hungry family can be fed. A store employee can enjoy a simple joke. These are small graces each of us can give. And the promise they provide not only sustains others but our own souls as well.

*It is worth any sacrifice...
To see eyes that were listless,
Light up again;
To see someone smile
Who seemed to have forgotten
How to smile;
To see trust reborn
In someone
Who no longer believed
In anything
Or anyone.*
